In the first week of fall at preschool, we are slowly starting our fall unit in hopes that some signs of fall will soon be upon us. We also began our community helpers unit and learned all about the important people who help us each day.

In Math, we reviewed the four basic shapes and learned the number 4. I was able to do some individual testing with each preschooler on skills that they have been taught since the beginning of the school year. I will share the results with you at Parent Teacher Conferences next week.

We have read approximately 30 books in the classroom, so our 100 book chart is slowly filling up.

As our fall signs begin to appear around us, your child may bring fall things to put on our Science table to share with the class. We will be doing fall activities for the next several weeks.

The children had fun doing lots of puzzle activities about community helpers and their jobs.
