READING – STAN'S STUNT

This week's story is STAN'S STUNT. In this tale of woodland animal friends, each character has a kind of "story" to tell. As the animals show off the stunts they can do, it's the skunk who has the last laugh.

READING STORIES

As some of you have noticed, the stories in the hardback reader are getting a little longer. The students are asked to read at least half of the story the first night the reader goes home. Most of the students will probably read the entire story the first night. That will be great! However, the hardback reader will be sent home a second night, too. This will allow all the students to complete the story with an adult. Also, if the student finishes the whole story the first night with an adult, they may just read the story on their own the second night. These stories are great reading practice.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY LINDA
