Dear Parents,

This week we begin a unit of multicultural stories in Reading. We will read Everybody Cooks Rice, which is a story about a little boy who tastes the supper at each of his neighbors' houses finally returning home for his own supper. We will use chopsticks as we eat our own Herbed Rice in class. In English, we will talk about the differences between narrative and expository writing and work on our own stories.

In Math, we will continue to work on Geometry. Students have shown great improvement in their memorization of the multiplication facts. Thank you for the time you take to work with them at home.

The first business day in our economics unit will be Wednesday. Students, who are not ready with their business, can simply spend their "money" and observe others this first day. We will let you know when businesses will be next week, so that you may come visit.

Parent/Teacher Conferences are scheduled for March. If you would like to meet before state testing begins, we would be happy to conference with you this month instead of next. Give us some dates you could meet, and we'll work it out.
