Pi Day makes math fun and delicious

March 14 or 3.14 is otherwise known as Pi day at USD# 377. Students from the Math Club planned several activities that focused on the relationship of the circumference of a circle to its diameter referred to mathematically as Pi or 3.14159... From music to art to memorization the high school and middle school students celebrated Pi. One of the highlights of the day included time for students to eat pie or, in senior Simon Nolting's case, wear pie. Math students at the high school also participated in Pi centered activities that included empirically proving Pi and some spirited discussion on Archimedes and his circles. Pi day proves that math is fun and can be delicious too!
